

Thinking differently about Scottish Public Services

Questioning the Future Seminar

12 April 2010, 2.00pm – 4.00pm, The Scottish Parliament

Continuing the series Questioning the Future, this Forum will explore the delivery of Scotland's public services, now and in the future.

As we face a future of public sector budgetary constraints, rapid technological change and shifting relationships between citizens, government and the third sector now is the time to think imaginatively about the delivery of services for people in Scotland, driving greater value for money for the taxpayer.

This event will be a mixture of case-studies, discussion and debate.

Who Should Come: public service providers, policy makers, Forum members

As ever places are limited so if you wish to attend please contact Donald Jarvie at Donald.jarvie@scottish.parliament.uk